

touch

decor

issue no. 21 | october - november - december 10

Armani 5th Avenue:
The Latest Addition
to the Eminent
Armani Name

Perforated Concrete Exteriors:
Varied Selection of Unconventional Structures

Eco Touch:
Sustainable Architecture...
A Reinvention of Urban Living

House in Somosaguas:

Signature Curves
and Bold Horizontal Lines

Located in the outskirts of beautiful Madrid, Spain this magnificent residence in Somosaguas combines the ever-changing signature designs and the technical experimentation of the Spanish architecture firm A-cero under the direction of the famed Joaquin Torres. Stylized curves in harmony with the bold shapes, makes this residence one of the finest examples of today's contemporary designs. Before entering the house, one can definitely sense the splendour interiors awaiting inside this modern architectural structure.

The intricate range of spaces with different heights and levels simplifies the varied spacing of the interior. The lack of columns and other elements that would interrupt the fluidity and openness are not included in the design while the light materials have been used to improve this feature.

In the lower level of the Somosaguas residence is the main hall, is covered by a curved ceiling that accentuates its relevance, living and dining areas, master bedroom, gym, interior pool, kitchen and service areas.

White aluminium finishing in the bathrooms complement the large white ceramic tiles that cover the floors.

On the upper level is a painting studio set under a long curved ceiling where one can have the best views overlooking the surrounding landscape and where natural light illuminates the space. The basement is basically dedicated to bestow health and leisure for the residents with a bar, a games room, a chill out area, a modern massage room, projection room, cellar and gym. ●